Where do our fears live?

What is it that causes you the most anxiety, worry and fear? It is a struggle we all deal with. There is no shame in admitting it. So what is it? Identify that which overwhelms you the most because it seems that Satan preys powerfully upon our fears. In addition, our fears can be paralyzing.

In addition, fear is, in the final analysis, always a lie. However, we often feel helpless when we try to fight our fears alone. We have no defense. We just let the tape run in our head cataloging all the things that could go wrong, and probably will go wrong, and all the reasons why we should never hope.

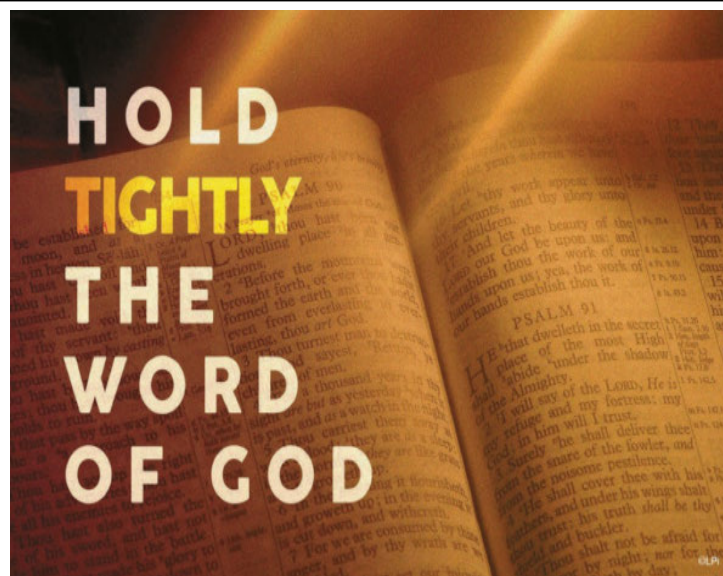

Hope is the antidote to fear. Hope can only be offered in the darkness, without guarantees. In addition, the reason that we often do not hope is that we do not want to be disappointed. However, what if we took the pressure off ourselves? What if we gave up our notion that we can accomplish everything through our self-discipline and will, and just let God do it?

The reason we do not do this is obvious. Because God might not do the things we want. We think that being able to do what we want is freedom. In addition, letting God be free to do to us what He wants, is blind obedience. We humans like to control things. However, this abandonment in blind obedience to a God who truly loves us is where everything really begins. Hope and obedience is meeting Christ at the point of our greatest fear, a Radical courage.

In these days where there is so much, presumably, to fear, so many dangers, and so much doubt, we can turn to Our Lady and she will lead us to the Cross. Our Lord will meet us there, at the point of our greatest fear. He will listen. In addition, He will set us free!
